FROM THE SUB DEAN

Dear friends and colleagues,

I hope you have enjoyed this year's programming. We have one more event this season, the annual Members' Recital, Women in Music (with Louise Mundinger, Dean of Boston AGO, and oboist Jane Murray as our guests), followed by a potluck dinner and our Annual Meeting on Sunday, June 2nd at 4:00 p.m. at Central Congregational Church in Providence.

The potluck dinner and meeting are members-only events, but the Members' Recital is open to the public. I encourage you to invite your music-loving friends and colleagues. This special event is a veritable WIMfest South. When Louise Mundinger was Sub-Dean of Boston AGO (now Dean), that chapter started hosting Women in Music Festivals. Last year, one of our own members wondered why we didn't have more women participate in these events. So this year, we planned a season to honor women musicians and clergy. Our RIAGO Chaplain, Jamie Washam, opened the year at the First Baptist Church in America, followed last month by international concert artist Katelyn Emerson's Solo Organ Recital. We wrap up the year in June with WIMfest Members' Recital of women composers performed by women from among our membership. I hope you have enjoyed this season and will join us for the finale.

I love hearing from you, and although I cannot guarantee that we can implement all your suggestions, I welcome your feedback and ideas and find inspiration in reading them! Keep them coming!

Gigi Mitchell-Velasco, Sub Dean

composers and performers to be presented at the Members' Recital

KATELYN EMERSON TAKES THE CAKE

Hearty congratulations go to the Rhode Island chapter of the American Guild of Organists for their efforts in presenting international concert organist Katelyn Emerson recently at S. Stephen's Church in Providence. The large enthusiastic crowd was treated to a varied program from Sweelinck to Sowerby. A large screen afforded a birds-eye view of the organ console which would have been otherwise completely invisible as it is sitting below floor level behind the rood. From time to time, Emerson would step up onto the bench and climb out of the console to speak to the audience and give anecdotes and informative notes about each piece or section.

Registrations to scale down the sizeable three-manual, 76-rank Austin organ for the Vivaldi/Bach Concerto were simple and tasteful with string imitative articulations. A judicious choice of colorful voices allowed the Est-ce mars variations of Sweelinck to buzz and sparkle, appropriate to the period.

In the Howells Rhapsody III, appropriately dark and brooding, we could observe onscreen the effortless registration changes, sometimes several per bar, which allowed orchestral-type crescendos and shadings for a dramatic reading. The Franck Prière followed. Although a deeply affecting work, it served as a tonic and safe passage from the violent intensity of the Howells. Careful pacing and care of the solo voices allowed the Wagnerian influence and chromaticism its fullest impact.

The last third of the program, which Emerson characterized as "lighthearted," offered Boëly's Allegretto as "a palate cleanser" as she put it, which was followed immediately by the romping and ebullient Parker Allegretto. The virtuosic Sowerby Pageant which calls for mad skills on the pedal board, brought the 100+ audience to its feet! They were treated to a generous encore of an angular Langlais trio played at a fast, heart-stopping tempo which brought yet again a thundering applause and standing ovation.

We ended the triumphant evening with wine, pastries, strawberries and a cake with Katelyn's picture on it. Yes, she took the cake that evening! Literally and figuratively!

Thanks to Dr. James Busby at S. Stephen's for hosting this program, affording us an elegant venue and wonderful instrument, to Joseph Rotella, organ curator, who did a brilliant job preparing the organ for the evening.

Thanks also to RIAGO Dean, Stephen Kirby, and to Dan Lemieux and Melissa Burbank of Meta Organworks for allowing us to use their screen and equipment. Thanks especially to my husband, Noel Velasco, who, although not a member of the Guild, did everything from creating publicity materials and program lay-out, to serving as artist-liaison and setting up the massive screen so integral to audience appreciation of the "behind the scenes" gymnastics.
