FROM THE DEAN

Dear Colleagues,

How much contemporary organ music do you play? Are you familiar with established composers of organ music from the 20th century such as the French Marcel Dupré, Olivier Messiaen, and Jean Langlais; Germans Paul Hindemith and Helmut Walcha; English Herbert Howells (a personal favorite!), Herbert Sumsion, Kenneth Leighton and William Mathias (well, a Welshman, really!); Canadian Healey Willan, and Americans Horatio Parker (just barely in the 20th century!), Leo Sowerby, Virgil Thompson, and many others? And as far as the currently active American composers of the 21st century are concerned, do you play the music of Gerald Near, Craig Phillips, Robert Powell, or Charles Callahan (who writes instantly “accessible” but worthy music, usually based on hymn tunes, with a rich, post-romantic harmonic language and lots of colorful registrational opportunities)? I would encourage you to look into some of this fascinating repertoire, and be sure to come to our November 18 event, when we will celebrate both new organ repertoire (all written in the past 20 years or so), and the careers of our two “next generation” recitalists (both under 30).

It really is crucial that we take a vital interest in the continuing life of our art, and support the younger organists rising through the ranks and aspiring to vocations in church music! Do join your board, your colleagues, and many friends of the organ, at our NEXT GENERATION RECITAL with Edward Landin and Colin MacKnight, on Friday November 18th, at 7:00 pm, at Central Congregational Church in Providence. At the reception following the recital, Edward and Colin will be interviewed by Christian Lane (former AGO National Vice President and Councillor for New Music – you see where I am going with this theme!) who will moderate a panel discussion about the young organist in the future of the profession. You will not want to miss this recital and discussion, and do please bring your clergy, musician, teacher and student friends as we engage a larger audience in this all-important topic!

And while we’re on the topic of new organ music, do please try to get to our colleague Mark Steinbach’s recital at Sayles Hall at Brown University on October 1st! This promises to be a stimulating and innovative program featuring some unusual new music. Attend and support Mark in his important work! See the listing and item for this event on the next page.

We assemble at the Music Mansion in Providence on Sunday October 30, and learn about and hear the historic Estey player organ there! Stephen Martorella plays a short recital offering an enjoyable glimpse into the lost world of the Victorian “house organ.” Yes, the organ had a long and busy life in the households of “the rich and famous,” and it will be fascinating to take a glimpse into the organ’s secular history in this way. See the listing in Events on the next page.

Happy playing (and singing, and teaching!) this fall. See you in October and November!

John Brooks, Dean

NEW MUSIC FOR ORGAN

Brown University Organist Mark Steinbach will perform the United States premieres of Guggenheim award winning composers Eric Nathan's Immeasurable and Wang Lu's Missing Absence. Steinbach performed the world premiere of these compositions at the Cathédrale Notre-Dame de Paris in July and went on to perform the German premiere at the Nikolaikirche in Berlin. Also on the program are works by Bach, Pärt, Messiaen, and Glass.

Mark writes: I am very excited about these new pieces which I commissioned from these young composers. Eric Nathan also has a commission with the BSO which they will be performing this fall. I performed their works in Notre Dame in Paris in July and then at five other venues in Germany, including Halle (Handel's church). (See listing, opposite.)
